AMCIS 2010 will include state-of-the-art research and broad-interest tutorials, tracks and mini-tracks offering high-quality research papers, panels from experts in academia and industry, and highly skill-oriented workshops.

AMCIS 2010 will feature tracks directly dealing with practitioners' issues (outsourcing, IS training, and emerging information technologies) as well as CIO panels discussing issues such as evolution of IT communities of practice, and collaboration between academics and practitioners.

PAPERS are peer-reviewed using a double-blind system and will be considered for Best Paper Awards. In 2010, a Best Paper Award for a practitioner-oriented paper will be selected with input from CIOs.

To strengthen both the quality and the interdisciplinary nature of the conference, papers that deal with both technology and management issues will be reviewed by at least one specialist in each area.

THE CONFERENCE will include:

- Special poster sessions for selected research papers that are appropriate for informal presentation.
- Special working sessions for selected research papers on Sunday with track chairs.

"There is only one place on earth that has it all" from archeological heritage like Machu-Picchu to the most amazing and privileged nature and landscapes, from its festivities and traditions to its incomparable cuisine, Peru has everything to make your visit an unforgettable experience. AMCIS 2010 will take place in Lima, the capital city, in the district of San Isidro, the most attractive business, residential and cultural area of the city (www.sanisidrolima.com). Close to shopping and commercial centers, within easy access of Lima's historical city centre and just 7 miles from Lima's Jorge Chavez International Airport (www.lap.com.pe).

Think about what will be like to enjoy Peruvian gastronomy, the best of which can be found in Lima. Imagine having a hands-on experience of the social and economic reality of a country that has maintained positive growth despite the international crisis. Let your mind wander and envision finalizing your stay in Peru in the majestic city of Cusco, completed with a trip to Machu-Picchu, or any of the many sightseeing places throughout the country –Sipan in Chiclayo; Kuelap in Chachapoyas; Arequipa, the famous sillar colonial city; Manu, the largest ecological reserve in Latin America; or Caral, a city as old as Mesopotamia located near Lima, among others.

FREQUENT ASKED QUESTIONS

Do I need a visa to travel to Peru?

Traveling to Peru only requires a valid passport for citizens of the Americas (except Cuba), European Union, South-East Asia, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. Citizens from other countries should request a tourist visa in the Consulate of Peru in their respective country. To determine if you need a visa go to: <http://www.consuladoperu.com/archivos/visaextranjeros.htm>

How do I get to and from the airport?

AIS has selected a Destination Manager company who will provide different options for attendees to get from the airport to the hotels including private cabs, shuttles and private vans at very convenient rates. One way fare starts at $15.00 per person.

Is Peru dangerous (conference area, Lima, countryside)?

Lima, the capital city of Peru, is as safe as any large metropolitan city worldwide with more than 9 million inhabitants. The conference area is within the residential district of San Isidro, which has been specially selected for its safety. This does not mean that travelers should not take basic precautions such as not neglecting their belongings in public places or avoiding deserted sites at night.

What tours are available? How do I book tours?

Complete information about pre- and post-conference tours, as well as tours for guests is available at the conference website: <http://www.amcis2010.org>. These tours will be offered by the selected Destination Manager company for AMCIS 2010 at very competitive rates.

A SUGGESTION: Book your flight as early as possible and enjoy airfare rates similar to those when traveling in the US from coast to coast.
